(This session will last for an hour)

Rickesh Kishnani is an active angel investor and serial entrepreneur, having created several successful businesses across Asia and the US over the past 20 years. In 2014 he launched the world's first rare whisky fund which offered investors a unique opportunity to capitalize upon the exponential, world-wide growth in demand for rare single malt whisky. More recently he raised capital to build Holyrood Distillery in Edinburgh, and co-founded the Glenor Cask Company, a single malt whisky cask business.

Prior to finding his passion in the wine and spirits industry, Rickesh was part of the start-up team at HookLogic in NYC and served as President of AIESEC US. Rickesh holds a BSc in Economics and Organizational Management from the University of Michigan.

Join us to hear the excitement and pitfalls of Rickesh's whisky fund journey, from creating the investment proposition to pitching the investors, to the surprise effects of Brexit, not to mention the knotty problem of how to custody and value unique whisky bottles ...

This session will be run on Zoom.
